Report of Schools.

DISTRICT No. 1—ENFIELD.

Higher Department.—Summer and fall terms taught by Flora Goodenough. This teacher made a decided improvement in the condition of the school. At the time she took it, it was in a very disorderly state. But her firm government secured good behavior at once. She also won the esteem and affections of her scholars, and exerted a good influence over them. The scholars however did not make as much progress in their studies, as could have been desired. But in reading they improved greatly. The qualifications of this teacher are good and with the requisite effort on her part, she can become successful. This teacher and the teacher in the Primary Department deserve honorable mention for having furnished the school-rooms with maps, a globe, dictionary, etc., from the proceeds of an exhibition gotten up by them.

Winter.—Taught by Mary E. Wilmarth. The school this term came fully up to the expectations of the Committee. It was decidedly the best term of school there has been in this department for a long time. The scholars heretofore have been rather backward, ranking considerably lower in their studies than several other schools in town. But the examination at the close of this term, showed that the school had redeemed itself, and was equal in rank to any in town. The school was very large, and rather difficult to manage, but the decision of the teacher secured good order. The secret of her success lies much in the fact that she gives her whole mind to it, sparing no effort, in school or out of school, that she deems necessary for the advancement of her pupils. The following were neither absent nor tardy. Helen A. Carr, Emma Bell Cooper, Jennie M. Huse, Lizzie M. Jones, Alice Morgan, Cora Nelson, Leona A. Pattee, Gracie L. Stanley, Augusta S. Williams, Nathan Carrier, Robbie Fitzpatrick, Geo. Hall, Willie E. Howe, Elmer E. Jones, Irwen Leviston, David M. Ladd, Freddie A. Spencer, Irving Whittier, Frankie Withington, Jimmie H. Carr.

Primary Department.—Three terms taught by Belinda M. Stevens. This teacher has innumerable resources, wherewith to call out the faculties of the brood under her charge. She awakens their desire to learn, and stimulates their ambition to excel. Sometimes she praises the dull and backward child and sets him aglow with courageous effort to learn, and by ways that to most teachers would be past finding out, she manages to keep the whole school at vigorous study, and in perfect order. The little ones have all made rapid progress. The good judgment and long successful experience, of this teacher, are a sufficient recommendation to her anywhere.

DIST. NO. 2.—SHAKER HILL.

Summer.—Selina D. Pettengill, teacher. This teacher did well in advancing her scholars. The school was orderly, and interested in their lessons. More energy on the part of the teacher would have been an improvement.

Fall.—Alice E. Day, teacher. This term of school was very successful. When I visited it the last time, it was more than a week before the close, and the scholars had not reviewed any of their studies, but upon examination they showed that they were familiar with what they had gone over, answering nearly every question perfectly. This teacher deserves much praise for the thoroughness with which she teaches. She makes every thing plain, and has it well learned by the scholars, as they advance. Considerable attention was paid to writing, and the progress made by the scholars in this branch was excellent. The writing books were very neat.

Winter.—Laura E. Tilton, teacher. This was a short term of five weeks only. The school made all the progress that could have been expected in so short a time. This, added to the fall term, made a very profitable term of school.

DIST. NO. 3.—JONES' HILL.

Summer.—Sarah W. Haskins, teacher. This teacher is well qualified and has an energetic way that cannot fail of success. She labored hard in the school, giving the few scholars that attended, the benefit of her whole time. The reviews at the close of school showed that the scholars had profited well by her efforts.

A Fall and Winter Term taught by Sophronia Bailey. A fair term of school. The teacher was young and inexperienced. She should concentrate her mind upon her school and allow nothing else to occupy her attention. Success is attained only by diligent efforts. Two and a half weeks of school were added by Julia W. Gile, which I did not visit.

DIST. NO. 4.—EAST VILLAGE.

Summer.—Emma L. Marston, teacher. This teacher as regards education is well qualified, and she did well. She needs, however, more energy in the school-room. She has good abilities, but needs bodily health to make them effective. She should take plenty of out-door exercise and acquire more physical stamina.

Winter.—Otis H. Marion, teacher. We found nothing to criticise in this school. Mr. Marion is one of the best of teachers. The district was very fortunate in securing his services. There were some fine scholars that attended, and they made excellent progress. The spirit and order of the school were such as pleased us.

DIST. NO. 6.—EAST HILL.

Summer.—Alice Pillsbury, teacher. She is a young teacher, this being her first term. She did very well indeed. Her government was good and the school made fair progress in their studies. There are a good number of scholars in this district; the school house is a good one and pleasantly located; there is fine scenery in this district.

Winter.—George F. Pettengill, teacher. At the opening of the school the scholars seemed dull and backward, and the prospect, to the teacher, looked discouraging. But at the close I witnessed a most favorable change. All seemed awake and interested, and the countenances of the scholars told the evident improvement they had made. They were orderly and attentive. If all teachers made the same resolute effort, and concentrated their thoughts upon their schools as this teacher has done, our schools would prosper much better. The progress of the school was greater than I expected to find, and the closing exercises were very good.

DIST. No. 7.—OAK HILL.

Two short terms taught by Evelyn M. Jones. Miss Jones is a good teacher. She governed this school easily; It is a very pleasant school and easy to manage. The pupils showed that during the time they had been attending school they had not been idle. There are good scholars here and they are deserving of a longer period of school than what they get.

DIST. No. 9.—CAMBRIDGEVILLE.

Two terms taught by Emma M. Yeaton. This was a gem of a school. The scholars were very bright and forward for their ages. We commend the fidelity with which Miss Yeaton has discharged her duty as a teacher. The school was every way satisfactory; there was perfect order. The teacher was alive in her school and enlisted the attention and awakened a desire to learn, in every scholar under her charge. By having the school for several terms in succession, she has been enabled to promote the advancement of her scholars far more than is usually done in our schools. We think it an excellent plan when a school gets a good teacher, to keep her. Much more is accomplished in this way than by having frequent changes. But in this instance, our advice comes too late.

DIST. No. 10.—GEORGE HILL.

One term of school, Mary Dresser, teacher. The scholars made fair progress and were benefited by the school. Still the school was not as successful as could have been desired. The teacher is well qualified, and tried, I think, to advance the school; but she did not succeed in sufficiently awakening the scholars' interest in their studies. There was a large number of tardy marks and absences, for a school of its size, which of course is unfavorable for the advancement of the scholars.

DIST. NO. 11.—ENFIELD CENTRE.

Summer and Fall Terms taught by Nettie L. Bartlett. It is pleasant to visit such schools as this was during both terms that this teacher was employed. There was activity, life and advancement. The Summer term was very successful, and the Fall term was still better. In mathematics, especially, the school did nobly. The closing exercises showed that the scholars had made excellent progress in their studies.

Winter.—William Guthrie, teacher. This teacher has good qualifications as far as education is concerned, but he was somewhat deficient in discipline. There seemed also to be a lack of promptness on the part of the scholars in answering the questions asked them. This school requires some one who has considerable energy to urge the scholars along.

DIST. NO. 12.—NORTH END.

Summer.—Eva J. Edwards, teacher. This was her first experience. She has made a fair beginning. The school was small and some did not come regularly, but, considering the circumstances, I think the scholars did well.

Winter.—Ella R. Gage, teacher. This term of school was very successful. The scholars all made good progress. The teacher was devoted to her work and made every effort to advance the school. Consequently the school was a good one.

DIST. NO. 13.—CHURCH FAMILY SHAKERS.

Summer.—Mary E. Briggs, teacher, assisted by Julia Ann Russell. The school was excellent. The scholars learned well, and were thorough in what they had studied. I enjoyed the recitations in geography very much. The maps drawn upon the board, and the recitations from them by the different pupils, were very fine. Miss Briggs is a beginner in teaching, and has done very well, and bids fair to become an excellent teacher. Miss Russell, who assisted, and had charge of the reading classes, is also a good teacher, and together they had a very profitable term of school. It is a pleasant sight to witness the perfect order, neatness, and decorum, of our Shaker schools. Another favorable feature of these schools is the attention they give to gymnastics and music. They also devote more time to writing than most of our schools do, which in this age is a very desirable accomplishment.

Winter.—James Russell, teacher. The school composed of boys made fair improvement for scholars that were so young. This teacher was attentive to the interests of this school. He was thorough in his instruction, and endeavored to make every thing plain to the scholars, and to have it well learned.

DIST. NO. 14.—JOHN E. GILE.

Summer.—Mary E. Martin, teacher. This school did not meet the expectations I had formed of it on my first visit. Then all seemed orderly, and the scholars studious. But on my last visit there seemed to be a spirit of confusion which prevented much study. Miss Martin is well qualified, and has a pleasant manner, well calculated to win the affection of her scholars, and, with a more strict enforcement of order she can become an excellent teacher.

Winter.—May L. Holt, teacher. This term of school was a considerable improvement on the previous one. The teacher, who is a beginner, did finely. She had life and ambition in the school-room. The scholars made good progress and the order was very good. We commend with pleasure those teachers who like this one take an interest in their schools and endeavor with all their might to make them what they should be.

This district is to be congratulated on having built a new school house the past year. It is a very neat and convenient one.

DIST. NO. 15.—WEST ENFIELD.

Summer.—Jennie C. Tilton, teacher. The scholars exhibited a good understanding of the studies gone over. Arithmetic, especially, (which seems to be this teacher's forte,) received much attention, and some of the pupils were excellent in this branch. The order of the school was good while I was present.

Winter.—Fanny B. Youngman, who is a teacher of long experience, commenced the school, but, in consequence of general sickness in the district, it was thought best to give it up. The school was in session but a month.

DIST. NO. 17.—FISH MARKET.

Summer.—Sarah M. Winship, teacher. The school passed a fair examination, and showed that they had been at work during the term. There are some quite good scholars here, considering their ages. More life on the part of the teacher would have been an improvement. The latter statement, I should judge, is also applicable to the Winter Term—begun by Anne T. Brigham, and closed without my knowledge.

DIST. NO. 18.—BAKER FAMILY SHAKERS.

Summer and Winter terms taught by Sally Ann Tucker. I have no fault to find with this school; but much to commend. It is indeed a pleasure to visit it, and see the happy looks on the faces of all present. The scholars were all wide-awake, and made excellent progress during both terms of school. Reading and writing were faithfully attended to. The writing books showed great improvement.

CLOSING REMARKS.

Those teachers who have not as good a report as they could desire, should not be discouraged. Neither should others think them unfit for teaching. Sometimes it is from want of experience, that they do not succeed, or an unfavorable situation. In a few cases the trouble has been a lack of effort on the part of the teachers, which they can correct if they will. Those who have got good reports should not rest upon their laurels, but remember that success in the future will come only as in the past, by hard, persevering effort. Teachers should be alive to the work in which they are engaged. They should give their best thought to it, and spare no pains. The responsibility resting upon them is great. Teachers should be more mindful of the fact, that intellectual improvement is best promoted when the physical laws of our being are duly regarded. They should see that the school room is kept clean, and well ventilated. In warm, or moderate weather, the doors and windows should not be all closed. Scholars are often dull, and stupid, simply from a deficiency of pure air. They should be encouraged to take active exercise in their sports when out, but when called in they should be made to study. Parents should take more interest in the education of their children. The people should feel more interest in common schools. Do not think every dollar paid out to build school houses, or otherwise spent on schools, is wasted. Those who have children, and those who have none, are all concerned in this matter. And if we desire the future glory of our Republic, and the highest civilization of mankind, let us regard with favor our common schools.

Respectfully submitted,

S. C. HAYFORD, S. S. Com.
